

The Theory of Environmental Reaction: The Cause and Cure for the Black/White IQ Disparity

The Theory of Environmental Reaction proposes that human genes, utilizing a process of genetic memory imprinting, can activate, deactivate or realign a series of genes to create a desired physical or behavioral trait in as little as one generation. The Theory further proposes that genetic memory modifications, as they relate to behavior traits, have an immediate and profound impact on the development of IQ and the adoption of positive or negative social behavior. This is terrific news because if we understand and accept the concept of GENETIC MEMORY IMPRINTING we can upgrade the testable portion of IQ for many of the poor and disenfranchised and improve the chances, not just for African Americans but for millions of Americans of all races, to increase the testable portion of their IQ and to develop positive social behaviors. We can utilize this Theory to improve our lives by helping those who are most in need, or we can ignore the promise of this Theory and do nothing but watch as our race-relations continue to dissolve, and then devolve, into a shooting war in the streets of America.
